Actions to Stop Doing

● We need to stop pushing uncommented or undocumented code to the repo. We must maintain the strict policy that all code is properly documented to ensure that other team members from different parts of the project can see another team member's code and know what it does.

Actions to Start Doing

● Despite having a framework ready on Trello, we need to start using it as a way to update and maintain our SCRUM board effectively. Even though the SCRUM master has kept his own log, we need an organized and public way of seeing the sprint progress.
● We need to be more explicit of who is doing what, and every one of the team should know their task as well as that of the rest of the team members. This will prevent overlap in tasks.

Actions to Keep Doing

● We should continue to notify the discord whenever a team member pushes their code to the GitHub repositories. This avoided unnecessary merge conflicts and kept team members up to date when something is accomplished or added
● The team should maintain the 3x weekly in-person meetings, as we are able to accomplish significant progress in the coding and management fronts when we are around each other
● We should continue our communication and updates through Discord because it has proved to be an effective way of organizing discourse on all aspects of the project and serves as a way of remotely conducting meetings if someone can't make it
